Puritan Pulpit

"AND THEREFORE WILL THE LORD WAIT, THAT HE MAY BE GRACIOUS UNTO YOU." Isaiah 30:18.

God often delays in answering prayer. We have several instances of this in sacred Scripture. Jacob did not get the blessing from the angel until near the dawn of day; he had to wrestle all night for it. The poo woman of Syrophenicia was answered not a word for a long while. Paul sought the Lord three times that "the thorn in the flesh" might be taken from him, and he received no assurance that it would be taken away, but instead was promised that God's grace should be sufficient for him.

If you have been knocking at the gate of mercy, and have received no answer, shall I tell you why the mighty Maker has not opened the door and let you in? Our Father has reasons peculiar to Himself for keeping us waiting. Sometimes it is to show His power and His sovereignty, that men may know that the Lord has a right to give or to withhold. More frequently the delay is for our profit. You are perhaps kept waiting in order that your desires may be more fervent. God knows that delay will quicken and increase desire, and that if He keeps you waiting you will see your necessity more clearly and will seek more earnestly; and that you will prize the mercy all the more for its long wait. There may also be somethign wrong in you which has need to be removed, before the joy of the Lord is given. Perhaps your views of the Gospel plan are confused, or you may be placing some little reliance on yourself instead of trusting simply and entirely to the Lord Jesus. Or, God makes you wait a while that He may the more fully display the riches of His grace to you at last. Your prayers are all filed in heaven, and if not immediately answered they are certainly not forgotten, but in a little while shall be fulfilled to your delight and satisfaction. Let not despair make you silent, but continue always in earnest supplication.

purposes of this e term "Inge's" will business operated by rs. Inge from 1924 to 1946.)

Mrs. Mary Inge recalls many incidents during their store's life.

Due to the nature of the store's merchandise, only salesgirls were hired by Mr. Inge. Often they were young, sometimes still students in the nearby high school. Occasionally, he would have to calm his new workers when they would become upset by the desire of steady customers to have "only" Mrs. Inge wait upon them. It seems they preferred her experience and age when it came to buying certain ladies items.

County Clerk Aldah Gordon was an "Inge's" salesgirl during World War II. She well recalls the time she discovered a box of highly-prized silk stockings hidden away in the back. Often, Mrs. Inge would save for her special customers the few pairs allotted by her wholesalers but these she must have forgotten. However, the appetite of moths and a period of long storage caused the stockings to fall into shreds upon handling - much to Aldah Barlow's chagrin.

"Inge's" was open five days a week from 7:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. and until 9:30 or 10:00 p.m. on Saturdays. Long hours allowed all possible customers, especially farmers, time to shop. Always closed on Sundays, Thanksgiving and Christmas, "Inge's" even closed early on "VJ Day" in August, 1945.

Saturday was always the store's busiest day with downtown so crowded that cars found driving on Main Street difficult.

The Depression years were hard times for all businesses but "Inge's" survived. For those who had the money, women's dresses cost 98 cents, print goods sold for 25 cent a yard and the best shoes were $2.98.

The Christmas season was always a special time. Though Mrs. Inge would begin laying away toys in August, holiday displays were never set up until December 1.

Before trucks, all merchandise arrived by train. Boxes and barrels of all sizes and shapes bound for "Inge's" were left on the depot's platform. Still vivid in Mary Inge's memory is the sight of her husband trundling stock across Main Street with a handtruck, often assisted by depot worker Bob Ellis.

For 14 years the Inges walked to and from work from their home on the far west end of Lee-Grant Avenue. The railroad tracks leading from their backyard to downtown served as their "sidewalk".

Unless buying trips to Baltimore wholesalers are counted, the Inges never took a vacation during the years they ran their store.

After suffering a mild stroke in January, 1946, Allison Inge sold his store's merchandise, fixtures and the privilege of using its name to Mr. Charles Jenkins. Several years before, Jenkins had bought two floors of the building next to Farmers Bank from L. E. Smith. For a few years after 1946, he operated both stores under the same name. Eventually he consolidated all merchandise into the building which was recently sold.

For Appomattox, "Inge's" has been more than a name or a store. It's been an important part of Appomatox's history.
